The project “ChaMon– Charadrius alexandrinus & Monachus monachus” has been presented within the 2011 standard call of the IPA Adriatic Cross-border Cooperation Program 2007-2013

Because of their wide range of distribution and their presence in the two more typical habitat of Adriatic sea (rocky and sand littoral), ChaMon project aims at the creation of a real ecological network, with the goal of the preservation of the Kentish plover (Charadrius alexandrinus) and the Mediterranean Monk seal (Monachus monachus) through a set of concerted actions which will include plans for sustainable development and efforts to raise the awareness of the local communities.

The main project activities are consolidating existing data on the status of these species by performing a new census, creating a map of all suitable breeding habitats in the area, establishing a plan for the sustainable development of the region which takes into consideration and renders compatible habitat conservation, tourism and fishing activities.

The project ChaMon was presented by the Gargano National Park as the Lead Applicant of the project and was originated with the coordination of AdriaPAN network. The project has been rejected and now it is under review in order to be candidate in a new future call.
